UNIVERSITY REPORT CRITICIZED:

Senator Smith Urges Retired Pay Action; Chairman Vinson Pledges Follow-Through

(TEXT OF LETTER, PAGE 19)

SENATOR Margaret Chase Smith (R-Me), in an 11th hour action, has urged Chairman Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.) to bring the retirement recomputation pay bill before the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Five other members of the 17-member Committee—Senators Styles Bridges (R-NH), Stuart Symington (D-Mo), Henry Jackson (D-Wash), Clair Engle (D-Calif) and E. L. "Bob" Bartlett (D-Alaska)—have sponsored recomputation legislation. So have 25 other Senators constituting nearly one third of the total Senate membership.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee told THE JOURNAL on 30 August that his Committee will report the recomputation pay bill "just as soon as we can after the Senate acts on it." The House Committee approved the measure during the last Congress and won House passage without a dissenting vote. After Senate failure to act on the bill last year, Chairman Vinson served notice that he would not consider the proposal again until it passes the Senate.

In a letter to Chairman Russell on 25 August, Senator Smith said she also favors the legislation but had refrained from "committing" herself until the Committee received the recommenda-

Bolté Plan Faces Close Capitol Scrutiny; Air Force Promotion "Crisis" Is Averted

THE Senate Armed Services Committee has alerted the Pentagon that the Bolté Committee Report will be placed under a Congressional magnifying glass when the career officer promotion and management plan reaches Capitol Hill next year.

Chairman Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.), said the Committee will conduct a "detailed examination" of all proposed officer billets to assure that they are fully "justified."

The Committee also strongly hinted that the Bolté proposals may not clear Congress during the 1962 session, and that the Air Force, in particular, may face

AF COLONEL PLANS, PAGE 19:

987 New Eagles In Army, Navy

THE Army has chosen 667 lieutenant colonels for temporary colonel, and the Navy has designated 320 line officers for four-stripe rank.

The Army hit a 44% selection rate in the primary zone. The Navy's rate was 34.65%.

The names of the Army colonel selections begin on Page 13. The Navy list will be found on Page 23.

The Army also announced that 4494 captains have been chosen for temporary major. Promotions from this list are published in this issue. A breakdown of the selection action to major will be found on page 19.

The 44% selection rate to colonel in the Army saw 543 lieutenant colonels chosen from 1222 eligibles within the zone. Slightly under 5% (72) of 1463 previously considered were picked up for promotion. Fifty-two officers, all on the Army list, were chosen for eagle rank from below the zone.

The Navy, in Line captain selections, has chosen 260 of a possible 782 commanders for higher rank. Above the zone, the Navy named only 46 of the 1010 eligible commanders (a rate of 4.55%) for higher rank. Only four off-

The San Diego Story; Where Was Naval Aviation Born?

IT all began quietly when Representative Bob Wilson (R-Calif) introduced House Concurrent Resolution 208 to "officially recognize San Diego, Calif., as the birthplace of Naval Aviation."

As happens with other seemingly-innocent little bills, this one moved easily along the legislative assembly line without fanfare. At first it all seemed so simple.

House Armed Services Committee Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) wrote a form-letter to the Pentagon asking the Defense Department for its views on the proposal.

Back came a reply from Capt. W. S. Sampson, USN, Bureau of Naval Weapons. It said: "San Diego has a logical claim to recognition as the birthplace of Naval Aviation" and the Defense Department "favors" the legislation. The neatly-typed letter gave no hint of controversy. But neither did it consider the fierce sectional pride of Congressmen.

On 15 August, Chairman Vinson called the bill up for consideration by the Committee. That is when the trouble began.

Congressman Wilson explained that "the first naval aviator was trained in San Diego 50 years ago."

Chairman Vinson, whose longest journey away from Washington was a 1919 visit to San Diego, said he was "proud" to have the bill before the Committee.

Representative Mel Price (D-Ill) said he wanted a little more "history" on the subject. "I think it is important," he said, "to determine when the first aircraft was purchased by the Navy, where it was quartered, and from what base it took off."

Committee Counsel Philip W. Kelleher observed that "The Department doesn't indicate who flew the first airplane. But, as Mr. Wilson says, the first trainee was out in San Diego."

Representative Charles E. Bennett (D-Fla) reminded the Committee "that a great number of admirals and other people in the Navy this year celebrated the 50th anniversary of naval aviation at Pensacola, Fla."

Chairman Vinson ordered Mr. Kel-tions of a University of Michigan study group which had been retained by the Committee to examine the entire military retirement system.

Senator Smith scored the University of Michigan report with the comment that she has studied it and is "not impressed with it at all."

She noted, however, that the report has now been before the Committee for two months and that there has been "sufficient and reasonable time" for

"full study and consideration."

Mrs. Smith also commented on the fact that the Defense, Treasury and Commerce Departments all have supported the recomputation bill and that the Departmental reports "have been before the Committee for its consideration for five months."

In view of these factors and inasmuch as the Congress is nearing the end of the session, Mrs. Smith said, "this legislation should be voted up or down by the Committee in the near future."

PRESENT BENEFITS QUADRUPLED:

House Boosts RIF-Pay For Reservists; Lt. Col. With 16 Years Would Get $16,320

THE House has voted a substantial increase in readjustment pay for Reservists released to inactive duty involuntarily.

The new pay formula, contained in HR 8773 which won House endorsement on 29 August and was sent to the Senate for action, quadruples present Reserve RIF payments.

Current lump-sum readjustment pay for RIF'd Reservists is one-half month's basic pay for each year of active duty. This is increased by the House bill to two months' basic pay for each year of active duty, but may not exceed two years' basic pay.

A lieutenant colonel with 16 years' service would receive $16,320 under the new formula, compared with $5440 under present law.

A major with 14 years' service would receive $13,680 instead of the present $3990.

A captain with 10 years' service would receive $9600 instead of $2400.

Here are other examples:

A master sergeant or CPO (E-7) with 14 years' service, $7440 instead of $2170.

CNO Anderson Insists Navy Men Must Have Adequate Leave, Relaxation, Recreation; Orders "Pace That Can Be Maintained"

THE Chief of Naval Operations wants action which will reduce the incidence of hypertension, coronary arteries, and ulcers among senior officers.

Admiral George W. Anderson, jr., has sent a message—text herewith—to all flag officers on the subject of "Physical Fitness and Alertness."

He has called for actions which will assure that Navy people take adequate leave and recreation and "maintain interest and enthusiasm in outside activities."

Admiral Anderson says: "Everyone, from the Boatswain's Mate to the Commander in Chief must see to it that he has a qualified standby and that the standby has the opportunity to demonstrate his capabilities by actually assuming responsibility."

The new CNO has expressed the desire that "except in unusual cases . . . sufficient time be provided whenever transferring personnel to permit officers and senior petty officers reasonable leave and dignified travel between duty stations."

In his communication to the flag officers Admiral Anderson says "the possibility of untimely death destroys the concept of the indispensable man." He says: "Flag Officers should require themselves and their subordinates, particularly 'key' subordinates, to take time off for the good of the Service and for the benefit of the individual."

Here is the text of Admiral Anderson's dispatch:

"I AM concerned that over recent years a large number of senior captains and flag officers have suffered either physical disability or premature death; others who were formerly sharp and alert have become ponderous and slow, others are so weighed down by the press of hour-to-hour and

NATO Wants U. S. Bids On Two Aircraft

NATO has asked for formal bids from U. S. industry on two aircraft capable of vertical or short take-off and landing (V/STOL), and has invited U. S. industry to participate in development programs for these aircraft.

The two aircraft to be developed are a strike and reconnaissance aircraft and a medium range transport aircraft.

This is the first time that U. S. industry has been invited by NATO to submit specification proposals for the development of aircraft which will be evaluated along with the proposals submitted to NATO by industries of all participating nations.

Proposals for development of the transport aircraft have to be submitted to NATO by 15 November, and for the strike and reconnaissance aircraft by 31 December.

From first page—

officer (E-6) with 10 years' service, $5100 instead of $1275.

The bill, if approved by the Senate, will cost about $8 million annually.

The Defense Department had recommended that the pay be entitled "severance pay" instead of "readjustment pay," but the House Armed Services Committee said it "could see no justification" for changing the name "because the present title more precisely defines the purpose of the payment. This readjustment payment is intended to provide these officers with a lump-sum payment which would enable them to readjust to civilian life, and it is not intended as a 'severance payment' for services previously rendered by the officer."

The Pentagon plan also provided that the payment would not include periods of war or national emergency hereafter declared by the President or the Congress. Noting that a condition of war or national emergency has existed "without interruption" since 1942, the Committee said if such language had been included in present law, no RIF'd Reserve officer "would have been eligible for readjustment pay." The provision was deleted from the bill.

Reserve personnel, under the terms of the Pentagon plan, also would have been required to pay back to the Government the entire readjustment payment if they later, at age 60, became eligible for Reserve retirement benefits. The Committee rejected the provision.

At present, about 60 per cent of the officer strength of the Armed Forces consists of Reservists.

The measure now goes to the Senate Armed Services Committee for further action.

USMA '37 Graduate Heads Map Service

Col. Robert C. Miller, Chief, Intelligence Division, U. S. Army Forces Far East, has been named Commanding Officer of the Army Map Service, Washington, D. C.

Activities under Colonel Miller's command range from topographic mapping, engineer intelligence studies, and collection of geodetic data to maintenance of the world's largest topographic map library.

Colonel Miller, USMA '37, received his Master of Science degree in Civil Engineering from the University of California in 1941, and attended the Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, and Armed Forces Staff College, Norfolk, Va.

RYAN FIREBEEES

keep more U.S. combat teams "on target" than all other jet targets combined!

WITH THE AIR FORCE

Ryan Firebees will again be the jet targets at the Air Force's World Wide Weapons Meet, William Tell—1961 (Oct. 16-26). This is the third time Firebees have been selected for this important meet since 1958 when the Firebee pioneered the use of free-flying targets at a weapons meet. This year, 15 squadrons of the Air Force's best Century Series fighter-interceptors will pit their skills against Q-2C's, the most reliable "enemy" jet target to challenge the Air Defense Command!

WITH THE NAVY

Since 1956, earlier version Ryan Firebees have made hundreds of operational flights with the U.S. Navy. Today, the newest Firebee, the transonic Q-2C, is operational with Fleet units of the Navy and ordered in quantity for extensive use. Firebees pioneered as the first jet targets selected for Navy Weapons Meets—at Operation "Top Gun," in 1959—and have established unmatched records of reliability for continuous on-range performance at these extended military competitions.

WITH THE ARMY

Firebees are flying at White Sands Missile Range under Ryan logistics crews who assemble, fly and maintain the jet targets, in coordination with U.S. Army missile teams. For Army low-level target needs, Ryan developed the successful Firebee ground launch capability, in 1959, which is now available to all Military Services with all Firebees. Newest Army Firebees are transonic 124-E targets now used to evaluate Army missiles for both low and high altitude performance.

No other target compares with the recoverable Ryan Firebee for high-speed, high-altitude reliability and low cost per target mission. Ryan Aerospace—Ryan Aeronautical Company, San Diego, California.

Senate Committee Reports On Air Force Officer Promotion Plan

(THE JOURNAL publishes herewith the text of the report which accompanied the favorable action taken by the Senate Armed Services Committee on legislation to amend the Officer Grade Limitation Act to provide increased promotion opportunity in the Air Force. See story, Page 1).

THE Committee on Armed Services to whom was referred the bill (H.R. 7809) to provide for improvement of the active duty promotion opportunity of Air Force officers from the grade of major to the grade of lieutenant colonel, having considered the same, report favorably thereon with an amendment and recommend that the bill do pass.

AMENDMENT

The bill is amended by striking all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

That, during the period beginning on the date of enactment of this Act and ending at the close of 30 June, 1963, any authorized strength prescribed for the grade of lieutenant colonel by or under section 8202 of title 10, United States Code, may be exceeded by not more than four thousand.

EXPLANATION OF COMMITTEE AMENDMENT

The committee amended the bill in two respects. First, the temporary increase authorized was extended until the close of 30 June, 1963, rather than 30 June, 1962, as provided in the bill as it passed the House. The bill contained the relatively short cutoff apparently on the assumption that Congress would enact in the next session of Congress a complete revision of the active-duty promotion laws relating to each of the military services that would, among other things, provide for a permanent increase in the authorized strength of major and lieutenant colonel in the Air Force. Since there is no assurance that such a far-reaching legislative item would be enacted during the next session of Congress, an extension of the temporary authority is considered necessary.

Second, the committee reduced the temporary increase in the number of lieutenant colonels authorized by the House bill from 4,800 to 4,000. The legislation as submitted to the Congress by the Department of Defense authorized a temporary increase of only 3,000. After considering a number of elements involved in this entire matter the committee feels that a temporary increase of 4,000 in the number of authorized lieutenant colonels would be sufficient to permit the Air Force to adequately meet its temporary promotion problem. The details as to the effect of the 4,000 increase is set forth in later portions of this report.

PURPOSE OF THE BILL

The purpose of this bill is to enable the Air Force to continue until 30 July, 1963, its temporary promotion program to the grades of major and lieutenant colonel. The authorization of the additional 4,000 vacancies for the grade of lieutenant colonel will enable the Air Force during fiscal years 1962 and 1963 to—

- (1) select active-duty captains, both Regulars and reservists, for promotion to the temporary grade of Major in their 13th year of commissioned service, and
- (2) select active-duty majors, both Regulars and reservists, to the temporary grade of lieutenant colonel in their 18th year of service. For both grades there would be an 80 per cent selection opportunity.

In addition, the increased authorization will permit those captains and majors who have already been selected to the next higher temporary grade by previous boards to receive their appointment or promotion to the selected grade. In the case of captains the promotion for most of this previously selected group would be in their 14th year of service, and for the previously selected majors, most would be in their 19th year of service.

RESULTS IF NO RELIEF WERE GRANTED

If no relief were granted in the form of an increased authorization for the rank of lieutenant colonel the following results would occur:

(a) Of the officers already selected but not promoted in fiscal year 1961 due to lack of vacancies there would be 3,000 captains already selected who could not be appointed to major in fiscal year 1962 due to lack of vacancies. Of the majors already selected to lieutenant colonel in fiscal year 1961, 195 could not be appointed as lieutenant colonels during fiscal year 1962 due to the lack of vacancies. During fiscal year 1962 the normal number of vacancies in the grade of lieutenant colonel would be 1,167. This number would be insufficient by 195 to accommodate the 1,362 selections in fiscal year 1961 to lieutenant colonel who had not been appointed due to lack of vacancies.

It should be noted that under existing law the Air Force authorization in the grade of major would be reduced by 3,000 on 30 June, 1962, as compared to the authorization on June 30, 1961. The Air Force under legislation enacted in 1959 was authorized a temporary increase of 3,000 in the grade of major until 30 June, 1961. Without further relief they would be required to be reduced to their permanent grade distribution by 30 June, 1962.

(b) There would be no temporary promotion program during fiscal year 1962 in the Air Force to the grades of major and lieutenant colonel. Without such a program Reserve officers on active duty could not be considered for active-duty promotion to these grades. The result would be that Reserve officers in the Air Force would have to remain on active duty without further promotion to the temporary grades of major and lieutenant colonel.

In addition, Regular officers would not be considered for temporary promotion. They would be considered only for permanent promotion and would be promoted to the next higher grade at the mandatory service points of 14 years to major and 21 years to lieutenant colonel.

REASON FOR EXISTENCE OF PROBLEM

Basically the Air Force promotion problem to the temporary grades of major and lieutenant colonel arises from the fact that the number of anticipated vacancies under the existing statutory authorized distribution for these grades is not sufficient to provide a reasonable promotion opportunity for the large number of active-duty Air Force captains and majors who have arrived at the 13- and 18-year points of commissioned service and who should normally be considered for promotion at about that point of service.

The chart below sets forth by fiscal years the number of captains and majors who will complete such service.

Captains with 13 or more years of active commissioned service

	Number	Cumulative total
1962	3,210	3,210		2,311
1963	3,028	6,238		2,399

1962	3,832	3,832	3,780	3,780
1963	1,927	5,759	1,707	5,487

² Regular officers mandatorily promoted to lieutenant colonel at 21 years' promotion list service (10 U.S.C. 8299).

PROMOTION OPPORTUNITY WHICH THE BILL WILL PERMIT

The bill, in authorizing the Air Force until the close of 30 June 1963, to exceed its permanent grade distribution by 4,000 in the grade of lieutenant colonel, will permit the Air Force to continue an 80 per cent selection opportunity to the grade of major and lieutenant colonel for its active duty officers, both Regular and Reserve. With this relief the Air Force during fiscal year 1962 plans to select 4,417 captains to the temporary grade of major and 6,090 majors to the grade of lieutenant colonel. These numbers will equal 80 per cent of those in the promotion zones for these grades. Captains will be selected to the grade of major in their 13th year of commissioned service. Majors will be selected to lieutenant colonel in their 18th or 19th year of commissioned service.

The actual promotions which will occur during fiscal year 1962 as a result of the additional 4,000 authorization are as follows:

To lieutenant colonel

Total promotions	5,167
From carryovers, fiscal year 1961	1,362
From selections, fiscal year 1962	3,805
Carryovers to fiscal year 1963	2,285

To major

Total promotions	3,870
From carryovers, fiscal year 1961	3,580
From selections, fiscal year 1962	290
Carryovers to fiscal year 1963	4,127

It will be noted that the promotions in fiscal year 1962 consist both of those already selected in fiscal year 1961 but not appointed due to lack of vacancies and a portion of the selections made in fiscal year 1962. Those selected in fiscal year 1962 for whom vacancies do not exist would be carried over until fiscal year 1963.

TEMPORARY NATURE OF RELIEF

The committee would like to emphasize the temporary nature of this relief legislation. The bill is being favorably considered in order to prevent an almost complete halt in the temporary promotion program of the Air Force to the temporary grades of major and lieutenant colonel. Without some relief the active-duty officers of the Air Force would be placed at a severe disadvantage as compared to the present promotion opportunity in these two grades in the Army and Navy.

ELEMENTS ESSENTIAL TO PERMANENT LEGISLATION

While the committee, as indicated above, is sympathetic to temporary relief because of special circumstances, any permanent legislation dealing with increased grade authorizations or with the Air Force "hump" problem should consider a number of basic principles and aspects of personnel management which were not a part of this legislation. Some of these specific areas which should be examined are as follows:

(a) Actual requirements for any additional billets—There should be a detailed examination of the grade requirements of the Air Force, as well as the other services, in order to determine whether the existing and proposed additional billets are actually required to meet the needs of each service. While the committee recognizes the necessity for reasonable career promotion opportunity, this principle should not operate without regard to whether additional officers are actually needed for the grade concerned.

(b) Reexamination of total officer grade structure—Not only should the number of officers for each grade be examined, but the total officer structure of each service should be examined from the standpoint of overall officer requirements. For example, the Air Force now has a total officer force of approximately 129,000 out of a total active-duty force of 819,000. The Army, on the other hand, has an active-duty officer strength of 99,000 and a total strength of 856,000. In the Navy there are 69,000 officers out of a total force of 621,000, and in the Marine Corps there are 16,000 officers out of a total of 176,000. The higher Air Force officer strength as compared to the other services has been justified traditionally on the basis of the extra pilot requirement. Due to the introduction of missiles, the Air Force is becoming more of a mixed force consisting of manned aircraft and missiles, with a reduced pilot requirement. There is the question, therefore, as to whether the continued proportion of officers in the Air Force compared to the other services is still needed to the same extent.

(c) Relevance of identical grade percentages to promotion flow and actual needs—There is also the basic question in connection with requirements as to whether the same percentage of officers for each grade is needed for all services where the size of the officer force varies greatly in number. A widely held principle is that the same percentage of officers for each grade is needed in all services.

Capitol Tug Of War On Naval Aviation

leher: "Read the report from the Navy. The Navy dispatch said: 'Lt. T. Ellyson, USN, was ordered to report to the Curtiss School at North Island, stated in HConRes 208, and did so on January 1911. He remained there until instruction until 31 March 1911, at which time he reported that, in the opinion of Mr. Glenn Curtiss, he was qualified to fly in fair weather. In April of that year he accompanied the school in its first move to Hammondsport, N. Y. Lt. Ellyson was the first naval officer to complete flight training under Navy auspices and he was officially designated as 'No. 1 naval aviator.' Since he received his initial flight training in San Diego, and while there reached a recognized stage of pilot proficiency, it is considered that San Diego has a logical claim to recognition as the birthplace of naval aviation."

Congressman Price wasn't completely satisfied. Who issued the order to Lt. Ellyson? He wanted to know. "And what was his title? And did he have any aviation setup in the Navy at the time?"

Chairman Vinson said he didn't think so. But, in any event, just because an officer was in Washington and issued orders to another officer that would be very meaningful.

Representative Samuel S. Stratton (D-NY) was recognized next. He said: "According to what Mr. Kelleher said this gentleman was presented his designation as Naval Aviator No. 1 in Hammondsport, N. Y. It is not a question of where he gets his training. It is where he officially is designated as naval aviator."

The letter was read a second time to clarify the point.

Congressman Wilson said he thought Congressman Bennett had a "valid argument about a conflict with Pensacola. Pensacola claims to be the cradle of naval aviation, and we claim to be the birthplace. If I remember my chronology properly, you have to be born before you are put in the cradle. You are talking about conception. I am talking about birth."

Chairman Vinson called for a vote. Congressman Price said he thought it was "wrong, but I will vote for it." The bill was approved 22-2. Thirteen of the Committee members were not present.

But that was not the end of the matter. When the bill was called up for floor debate, Representative Stratton objected to its consideration. He said Lt. Ellyson wasn't qualified to be a naval hydroplanes until 1 July 1911 when he piloted the Navy's first naval aircraft, the A-1, a Curtiss hydroplane on Lake Keuka at Hammondsport, N. Y. Although the Lieutenant received preliminary flight training at San Diego, Congressman Stratton said, "he had not become fully qualified as a naval aviator."

Missile Impact On Personnel Policies Raises Question At Capitol

the of officers, especially in the higher grades, is not required on the basis of actual grades in a larger officer force as compared one of lesser size.

In connection with identical percentages, should also be pointed out that such percentages do not necessarily produce the same promotion flow and attrition. In order to show the full effect of authorized percentages each grade a detailed examination should be given as to what will be the effective promotion and attrition resulting from each promotion zone being considered.

(d) Navy and Marine Corps method of setting "hump" problem—The committee wishes to point out the sharp contrast in approach taken by the Navy and Marine Corps to end their own "hump" problems existing in the grades of commander and captain, and equivalent Marine Corps grades, as compared to the approach of granting an additional grade authorization in order to provide promotion opportunity for the "hump." It would have been necessary for the Navy and Marine Corps to exceed their permanent authorized strength over the next 10 years by a substantial number, in order to give a reasonable promotion opportunity to those in the "hump" groups and at the same time avoid mandatorily retiring Regular officers prior to their normal years of service. The combined total of increased grades for commander and captain, and Marine Corps equivalent, would have been 5,100. If this approach had been taken, the net additional cost in the form of active-duty pay for the additional grades between 1960 and 1970 would have been $363,717,000. In order to create the necessary vacancies, the Navy and Marine Corps obtained legislation permitting mandatory retirement of certain Regular commanders and captains, and lieutenant colonels and colonels in the Marine Corps prior to their normal retirement points. In addition, during certain "hump" years promotion opportunity to commander and captain was severely reduced.

COST

The Department of the Air Force has advised that the additional cost of active-duty pay with the enactment of this bill as amended for fiscal year 1962 would be $5,772,000. For fiscal year 1963 the additional cost would be $14,336,000. The lesser amount in fiscal year 1962 is accounted for by the fact that the additional appointments authorized by the bill would not be in effect for the full fiscal year.

The Air Force further advises that these costs will be absorbed within the existing appropriations.

until he had completed his flights at the same time as the other two.

An official "Brief History of the Development of Naval Aviation" prepared by the Navy gives this chronology:

When the Wright brothers demonstrated their biplane to the Army at Ft. Myer, Va., in September 1908, two Naval officers were present and one "immediately saw the possibility of designing airplanes which could be launched from and land on the deck of a war vessel."

He subsequently requested an airplane and it was "turned down."

By September 1910, the Navy was receiving a flood of letters from inventors who wanted to sell "all kinds of airplanes." Capt. W. I. Chambers was appointed to answer the letters for the Navy. "In order to prove to the Navy that aircraft could be used with warships, Chambers arranged two demonstrations. The first was the flight of Lt. Eugene Ely, a civilian pilot, from the USS Birmingham at Hampton Roads on November 1910. Ely took off from a designated platform on the deck and, after landing dangerously close to the water, kept his plane in the air until he reached a point about two and a half miles away."

The chronology says, "Immediately after Ely's first success, the Navy accepted the offer of Glenn Curtiss to teach, free of charge, its first aviator, to Lt. Theodore G. Ellyson. While learning to fly, Ellyson helped Curtiss design two of the Navy's first three planes. Having obtained an appropriation for $25,000, Chambers sent in the first requisition for a Navy plane on 8 May 1911."

The 8 May date is the one on which the Navy annually celebrates the anniversary of Naval Aviation.

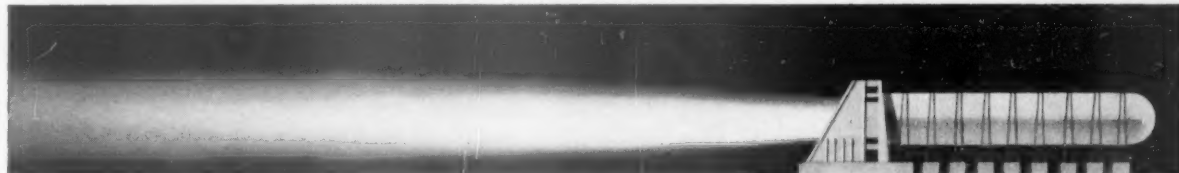

The tug-of-war between Congressmen Stratton and Gilson to win recognition for their respective States as the birthplace of Naval Aviation had not been resolved as THE JOURNAL went to press.

AEROJET FIRES WORLD'S LARGEST SOLID ROCKET

This segmented solid rocket booster developed far more energy than ever before achieved in solid rocket technology, surpassing the previous largest booster fired, also an Aerojet-General motor. Built and tested by Aerojet-General for the Air Force, this flight-weight segmented motor, combined with more of the same units, could launch a three-man orbital flight. The success of this firing, at a thrust level of approximately a half million pounds, confirms Aerojet's technical ability to scale up and produce reliable, low-cost solid propellant boosters for lifting large payloads into space.

COL. SWISHER IS TRANSPORTATION COMMAND G-3

COL. Arthur O. Swisher has been named Transportation Training Command G-3 at Ft. Eustis, Va. He succeeds Col. R. E. Vandenberg, who will attend the Industrial College of the Armed Forces, Ft. McNair, Washington, D. C.

Colonel Swisher comes to Fort Eustis from the Philippines where he was Assistant CofS, Joint Military Advisory Group. He lives on post at Eustis with his wife, Rachel. One son, Hunter, is a cadet at the U. S. Military Academy.

Services Will Liberalize JTR Rules For Overseas Housing And CofL Allowances

THE Defense Department will revise Joint Travel Regulations to permit more flexible payments of housing and cost of living allowances to Service families overseas.

The changes will continue these allowances for Service families until the day before their departure for the ZI or the day before their travel orders become effective, whichever is earlier.

Under present rules, the housing and cost-of-living allowances terminate the day before a military member leaves his overseas station on PCS orders.

It was often the case, however, that the military member was ordered to perform temporary duty on route to his new station and was forced to leave his old station before transportation could be arranged for his family. The families, in turn, were not authorized to accompany their military member during the TDY assignment.

This left the families "stranded" at their old duty station until transportation could be arranged or until their orders became effective. During this "stranded" period, they could receive neither the housing or cost of living payments authorized for others in their locale.

The new rules will bring regulations for the termination of the housing and cost-of-living payments in line with those which cover their commencement. The payments begin the day after either the member or his family arrives at their new overseas duty station.

Congress "Forgives" Service Families $800,000 Debt; $95,000 In Refunds Due

AN $800,000 Service-family debt was wiped out this week by Congressional approval of a "forgiveness" bill for members and former members of the Armed Forces who received erroneous family separation allowances during a 6-month period in 1956.

Action on the measure (HR 6244) was completed 28 August and the bill was sent to the White House for the President's signature.

It provides that Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps families will not have to return $719,000 to the Government, and those who already have paid back $95,000 will receive refunds.

When members of the Services were ordered to duty overseas during the period 29 February 1956 to 1 September 1956 in areas where dependents were not permitted and Government quarters were not available, they were awarded a family separation allowance payable as a per diem.

The Comptroller General ruled that the payments were not valid, however, and Service families who had received the payments were directed to refund the money to the Government.

The Pentagon in seeking relief legislation said the payments were made in good faith and members of the Armed Forces "acted in good faith when receiving the much-needed allowance" and it would be a "distinct hardship" if they were required to repay the money.

The House and Senate agreed and the measure was approved and sent to the White House.

SCHOOLROOM FOR ASTRONAUTS

On America's drawing boards and in the laboratories are two, three and five-man spacecraft, space platforms and manned lunar craft. The goal is interplanetary flight. Eventually, lifetimes may be devoted to a single space adventure.

But man must conquer near space before he goes afar.

Ready to serve as the trainer for future astronauts is NASA's Project Mercury spacecraft. This compact, one-man vehicle now carrying the first Americans into space is an astromedical laboratory to test man's reactions to this new environment. But the Mercury spacecraft can easily serve as a readily available and efficient schoolroom for future astronautics students making their first leaps into space.

Months of ground training will be necessary for coming space explorers. Then will come trajectory flights to experience weightlessness and spacecraft control. Earth-orbital flights will acquaint the future astronauts with spacecraft control, celestial and ground observation, re-entry techniques, artificial atmosphere and other environment concepts.

Only after he has mastered the "one-room schoolhouse of the space age" will the astronaut be ready to man a deep space vehicle.

Senate Chairman Says Services Must Justify Bolté Rank Plan

rugged questioning about the projected size of its officer force.

Commenting on present AF officer strength, Senator Russell observed that "the structure and mission of the Air Force has changed now."

The Senate Chairman's remarks came during hearings on the House-approved emergency legislation creating additional lieutenant colonel promotion slots for Air Force for the current fiscal year.

The Committee OK'd the plan after lopping off 800 of the 4800 additional lieutenant colonel billets approved by the House. But Chairman Russell made it clear that the action was taken reluctantly and only because of what he termed "the unusual conditions existing today."

The Committee also boosted the life-span of the measure from one to two years after learning that the Air Force would have to come back for an extension next year unless the single Armed Forces officer grade distribution table recommended by the Bolté Committee is approved in the next session of Congress.

Chairman Russell said he has not seen the Bolté report and "I don't want to leave any impression that we are committed to that report before we have seen it and have held extensive hearings."

Committee members hit Secretary of the Air Force Eugene M. Zuckert and AF Vice CofS General Frederic H. Smith, Jr., with some rough questions about the emergency legislation.

Secretary Zuckert said the Air Force faces a "crisis" in promotions to the grades of major and lieutenant colonel. If no relief is granted before Congress goes home, he said, "the Air Force will be unable to conduct a temporary promotion program to these grades" during the current fiscal year. Some captains and majors already selected for promotion, he added, would have to wait for their new rank until fiscal '63, and the Air Force would have to involuntarily retire some field grade officers "to get within the limits of the current grade distribution table."

The Secretary said if Congress approves the Bolté plan, the Air Force can eventually "offer Air Force officers comparable promotion opportunity to that afforded officers in the Army, Navy and Marine Corps."

Chairman Russell said the legislation puts Air Force officers in "a much more favorable position" than those in the other Services. He asked if the Air Force proposes to maintain its present officer-enlisted ratio as it moves to a higher missile mix.

Col. W. W. Berg said a "slight decrease" may result. He said it is "entirely possible that the officer ratio will come down."

Senator Stuart Symington (D-Mo.),

Sometime in 1963, this spacecraft will land on the moon. In it will be over 200 pounds of scientific instruments designed to gather, analyze and transmit information about the moon's surface, subsurface and atmosphere.

The Hughes-designed Surveyor will be built to "soft land." As it approaches the moon, after a 66-hour flight from the earth, retro-rockets will be fired to cushion the impact of landing.

Then, standing on three legs, the 750-pound moon explorer will set to work—as scientists here on earth watch via television. High-quality television pictures of the lunar landscape will be taken and transmitted. Drills will pierce the moon's surface and samples will be brought up into the spacecraft for chemical analyses. Other instruments will measure the geophysical characteristics of the lunar surface, as well as the moon's magnetic and radiation fields.

Hughes will build seven Surveyor vehicles which are scheduled to be launched at Cape Canaveral during the period 1963-66. The work is being performed for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Technical direction is by the California Institute of Technology Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

The information which Surveyor gives us will be an important step toward the day when man himself will stand on the moon and look out into the universe.

General LeMay Tells Views On Information; High Motivation Is Declared Essential

GENERAL Curtis E. LeMay has advised the Air Force regarding his views on the importance of an effective Information Program. He stressed that in the Aerospace Age "a highly motivated military force is essential to superior combat capability—the kind of capability that can deter aggression.

"Equally essential is a resolute and self-possessed citizenry," the CofS declared in a statement which continued as follows:

"Constant esprit de corps and determination in a military force and calm resolution in the citizenry are founded on understanding. And understanding of the ever-changing situation is dependent upon information—truthful, current information.

Right To Know

"The Air Force Information Program is based on this philosophy—on the belief in the right of all the people to know all the information about the Air Force that is consistent with national security. Air Force members—military and civilian, men and women, Regular and Reserve—and the general public must be kept informed.

"In accordance with Department of Defense policy we must help the American people, including Air Force members, to know: (1) The national evaluation of the nature of the aggressive threats to our country and the rest of the Free World, and national policy on the best military structure to deter a war, or win if one is forced upon us. (2) The day-to-day activities of the Air Force and its capabilities as an instrument through which national policy can be implemented to promote peace and deter war. (3) The need for constant improvement in personnel and equipment of the Air Force and for keeping ahead of any potential aggressor in the most significant scientific and technological activities affecting aerospace forces.

More Vital Than Ever

"The commander's responsibility to conduct a vigorous, imaginative information program is inseparable from his responsibility for the operational mission. The internal and external information function is only new terminology for basic and traditional practices of good military leaders. The complex requirements of today make the function more vital than ever.

"The successful Air Force leader in the Aerospace Age understands these facts. The combat ability of the Air Force in relation to that of the aerospace forces of any aggressor, and the support of the citizenry we serve and from whom our strength comes, depend on this kind of understanding."

Commissions Must Wait Active Duty Call

Airmen in alerted National Guard and Reserve units will not be permitted to accept direct appointments or apply for pre-commission training prior to their call to active duty.

"Notwithstanding" the fact that many National Guard and Reserve airmen have the necessary education to qualify for commissions, the Air Force says, "in order to avoid depletion of airman strength, members of Air Force Reserve units have been frozen in those units." The Air Force has also requested State Adjutants General to freeze members of National Guard units.

Following orders to active duty, the Air Force says, "qualified airmen may be considered for officer programs based on Air Force requirements at that time."

"In view of the foregoing," the Air Force says, "advise members of Reserve units who are to be ordered with their units that they will not attempt to secure commissions through any of the officer procurement programs until after they are on active duty."

Senator Russell Gets Pay Equalization Appeal

Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R-Me) has put the question of getting action on the pay equalization bill directly up to Chairman Richard B. Russell (D-Ga) of the Senate Committee on Armed Services.

Senator Smith, a member of the Committee, has called upon the Chairman to bring the matter before his Committee to the end that it should be "voted up or down" in the near future.

Mrs. Smith recalls that she had withheld taking a public stand on the pay bill while waiting for the Michigan University Study Report. Now that the report has been made she is "not impressed with it at all."

At this time, Senator Smith told Senator Russell in a letter, the report has been before the Committee for two months, the Defense Department and the Treasury and Commerce Departments have submitted favorable reports on the bill, and 30 senators, including five members of the Committee, have put their names on legislation to equalize retired pay—yet the Committee has made no move to consider the bill.

Congress should be impressed by the strong case made by Air Force Chief of Staff Curtis E. LeMay (see last week's JOURNAL) on the importance of people in the defense program. The denial of the new retired pay rates to those retired prior to 28 June 1958 has had a depressing effect upon the morale of people on active duty. They foresee that such a breach in faith could happen to them. To correct this, and thus provide a great boost in morale, would cost only $31 million—a pittance compared with the cost of some of the weapon systems we are buying.

Senator Smith has put her appeal to the right man. By failing to refer the measure to a subcommittee or to call it before his full Committee, Senator Russell is now blocking action. In the last Congress, it was Senator John Stennis (D-Miss), who held up the measure by virtue of his position as chairman of the subcommittee to which the bill had been referred.

We appeal to Senator Russell, whose sympathetic understanding of Service problems has contributed so much in the past, to take the steps necessary to start this vital legislation on its way to enactment.

A Fitting Memorial To Pearl Harbor Heroes

The years of devoted work by members of the Pacific War Memorial Commission and its supporters have been rewarded by the action of Congress this week in authorizing the appropriation of $150,000 to add to the $320,000 already raised by public subscription and the $50,000 appropriated by the State of Hawaii for the completion of a memorial on the hulk of the USS Arizona.

The funds already raised have been used to emplace extensive foundations on pilings as deep as the height of an 18-story building and to build a structural platform to form a bridge across the second hull of the Arizona. When Congress appropriates the $150,000 authorized by the new bill construction will begin on a chapel, memorial shrine, and ceremonial bridge.

It is fitting that this shrine atop the gallant battleship will serve as a lasting memorial to the entire 3600 men of all the Armed Services who gave their lives in defense of Pearl Harbor.

Wise Words From CNO Anderson

We hope Secretary of Defense McNamara and every other top civilian and military official of the Armed Forces will heed the wise counsel of Admiral George W. Anderson, jr. (see Page 1) in the matter of "Physical Fitness and Alertness." The new CNO has told all flag officers that, within the limitations of Service requirements, he wants Navy people to take adequate leave, recreation, and relaxation.

Admiral Anderson, until recently commander of the mighty Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean, makes the cogent point that in the Armed Forces there can be no concept of the "indispensable man." The CNO wants senior officers to give their subordinates the opportunity to "pull their weight in the boat."

In calm and reasoned manner, Admiral Anderson makes the cogent point that "the complexities of the world in which we live, the seriousness of the peril facing our nation, the need to keep our Navy strong and ready requires a lot of hard work from every one of us today, tomorrow, and for a long time to come. So set a pace," he says, "that can be maintained and have your commands and staffs organized, trained, indoctrinated, and administered accordingly."

His call for actions to improve physical fitness is one which needs to be heard "loud and clear" throughout the Defense Establishment.

President Kennedy's Position

I am enclosing for your information my exchange of correspondence with President Kennedy in August, 1960, just after he had won the Presidential nomination at the Democratic Convention. You will note that at that time, 18 August 1960, Mr. Kennedy was hopeful that HR 11318 (Equalization of Military Retired Pay) would be considered on the floor of the Senate before adjournment. He also felt that the proposed legislation had been justified by ample testimony.

I have no desire to belabor the issue, for our case has been ably presented and supported, however, I would welcome a vote on the present bill to equalize military retired pay on the floor of the Senate now. Even an adverse vote is preferable to having the bill held up indefinitely by the opposition of a lone Senator, i.e., Senator Stennis.

As President Kennedy's position is clearly outlined in his letter of 18 August 1960, perhaps his letter could be useful in your plans to secure favorable action before Congress adjourns.

Note:

President Kennedy's letter of 18 August 1960 addressed to Colonel Hall, was as follows:

"Thank you very much for your message regarding 11318.

"In my judgment this is both commendable and equitable, and I hope very much that it will be possible for this bill to be considered on the floor of the Senate before adjournment. It is legislation that has been justified by ample testimony."

General LeMay's Speech

Hooray for General (Curtis E.) LeMay. The Chief of Staff of the Air Force has spoken for all of us in uniform in supporting action (THE JOURNAL 26 August) to improve fringe benefits in the Armed Forces.

The general is certainly right when he says that we are well aware that Service pay cannot match the rewards in industry. But he is also right when he says that we want and need appropriate recognition. There is no question that action which would improve housing conditions, and give us a better break at commissaries and post exchanges would be a powerful boost to morale.

General LeMay's forthright speech rates a 4.0 salute from all ranks.

COMMANDER, USN

Your full text treatment of General LeMay's speech certainly is to be commended. The Nation needs to be told that People remain the key to victory on the battlefield. But many of us here in the San Antonio area were disappointed that he did not mention the problem of pay equalization. We keep hoping that some of our civilian and military leaders in Washington will speak out on this matter.

After all, the President has said he favors justice on the military pay front. It hardly seems that it would be a difficult thing for Pentagon people to support publicly what the President says he wants.

A Retired Reserve

Permit me to refer to the editorial page of your issue of 5 August 1961, on which was printed a letter from myself relative to the report of the Study Committee of the University of Michigan.

You have there erroneously ascribed this Committee and myself to an organization with which, I assure you, I have no connection; and one which, so far as I am aware, has neither a Committee concerned with Retired Reserves nor any interest in the subject.

While I appreciate your publication of the letter, and believe that it served a purpose in clarifying the situation it describes, I would appreciate it if you would note that my Committee (of which I am the Chairman) is a committee of the Reserve Officers Association.

SecDef Marshall Cites Journal Support; Adm.

Twining Has Other Duties; Gen. Sheridan Organizes

10 Years Ago—"Eighty-eight years of unswerving support of National Security and high devotion to the best interests of the men and women in the Armed Forces has established the Army Navy Air Force Journal as a Service institute. Its 88th anniversary offers me a welcome opportunity to wish it continued prosperity and success."—The Honorable George C. Marshall, Secretary of Defense.

50 Years Ago—It is common practice to make Navy officers Acting Secretary during the absence of the Secretary and Assistant Secretary of the Navy, but not in recent years, if ever has an officer been called upon to sit as a member of the Cabinet. There is a difference between signing routine papers as Secretary and acting as a member of the Cabinet, as did Rear Admiral Nathan C. Twining, Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance, on the day that Congress adjourned.

97 Years Ago—Ten days ago General Sheridan organized a force, which, though made up like its predecessors, of subdivisions unaccustomed to each other, yet surpassed them all in coherence and strength. It is a formidable column, with some tried infantry, and some Potomac cavalry, and, if properly handled, is adequate to the great, important, simple, and yet hitherto never successful task, the mastery of the Shenandoah Valley.

Navy Chief Tells His Views On Need For Adequate Leave

day-to-day affairs that they no longer permit themselves the opportunity to think; others are simply beginning to look like old men.

Service Suffers

"The net result is that the Service is not obtaining the best individuals have to offer at times in their careers when they should be making major contributions to the Navy and the Country. In my opinion, the foregoing is due in part, at least, to unnecessary pressure of work, failure to delegate duties and authority to subordinate officers, failure to utilize time to best advantage, failure to take outdoor exercise and to maintain interest and enthusiasm in outside activities.

"As a matter of fact the Surgeon General of the Navy has indicated concern about the disabling effects of a group of disease entities comprising such conditions as hypertension, diseases of the coronary arteries and ulcers. All of these have a tendency to become aggravated by emotional stress.

Interrupt Stress

"On the other hand, it is well known that if stress can be interrupted at frequent intervals, the human body is able to adapt itself to recuperate for further strenuous work. Prolonged and uninterrupted stress and strain can and must be counteracted by the beneficial effects of leave, relaxation and recreation. Outdoor or indoor exercise of a type of your own choosing is the finest means available to further your physical fitness and mental alertness.

"The mission of the Navy, involving as it does the security of the Country, is a 365-day a year continuing responsibility. All organizations, at all levels, must be ready to respond to any call at any time. However, this does not mean the development of indispensable individuals.

"Fore And Aft Concept"

"We must build depth to our organizations, we must produce 'number twos' and 'number threes' at all levels, capable of carrying on effectively, efficiently and with good judgment. This concept must be developed fore and aft and athwartships throughout the Navy, to the end that both our major organizations and subordinate organizations will be stronger and less strain is placed on hardworking individuals.

"To insure that this is possible top individuals must insure that their 'number twos' are trained, informed and given the opportunity to assume responsibility. Executive officers, command and staff duty officers, officers of the watch and deck must be made to pull their weight in the boat and must know that their seniors have confidence in their judgment and sense of responsibility.

"Everyone, from the Boatswain's Mate to the Commander in Chief must see to it that he has a qualified standby and that the standby has the opportunity to demonstrate his capabilities by actually assuming responsibility.

Take Appropriate Leave

"The possibility of untimely death destroys the concept of the indispensable man. In order to foster personal efficiency, promote mental acuity and physical vigor, as well as to postpone or avoid disability and untimely death, I desire that, within the limits imposed by scheduled operations, command activities should be organized so that appropriate periods of leave, recreation and exercise can be taken by every individual in a position of responsibility. Flag officers should require themselves and their subordinates, particularly 'key' subordinates, to take time off for the good of the Service and for the benefit of the individual.

"Furthermore, except in unusual cases (which are certainly going to occur from time to time), I desire that sufficient time can be provided when transferring personnel to permit officers and senior petty officers reasonable leave and dignified travel between duty stations.

Consult Medical Officers

"Another factor of importance is that of taking advantage of the wonderful medical services available to us in the Navy. When individuals have any sign of illness or fatigue, they should immediately consult a Medical Officer. The individual also should see to it that in the conduct of his annual physical examination he brings to the attention of the Medical Officer any symptoms which he himself has noted or for which he has any cause of anxiety. The worst action that an individual can take for himself or his family is to 'cover up' on his annual physical examination.

Hard Work For Long Time

"The complexities of the world in which we live, the seriousness of the peril facing our nation, the need to keep our Navy strong and ready requires a lot of hard work from every one of us today, tomorrow and for a long time to come. So set a pace that can be maintained and have your commands and staffs organized, trained, indoctrinated, and administered accordingly. Keep your self physically fit and mentally alert.

MEMO--

A THIRD STAR appears certain for Maj. Gen. William W. Quinn, veteran military intelligence officer, who leaves duty as Army Chief of Information 1 October to become Deputy to Lt. Gen. Joseph Carroll, USAF, first Director of the Defense Intelligence Agency. Deputy Secretary of Defense Roswell L. Gilpatric announced that General Quinn would serve for 3 years. The fact that the duration of the assignment was made public points to the likelihood that the Deputy billet will be made a 3-star post.

RADM. SAMUEL B. FRANKEL, Deputy Director of Naval Intelligence, was named to be CofS of DIA for two years. General Quinn, 54, USMA '33, served throughout WWII in key intelligence posts, and later served with the Central Intelligence Group, forerunner of the CIA, with which Admiral Frankel, 56, USNA '29, also saw service.

THE DIA CofS, Admiral Frankel, was sent to Riga, Latvia, in May '36 where he learned the Russian language. He also was married there to the former Esther Tellervo Von Hellens of Seattle. He later served at the American Embassy in Moscow, and, after CIA duty, was assigned in June '48 as Naval Attache at Nanking, China. He stayed behind a year after the Communists took over.

GENERAL CARROLL, a top FBI official before joining the AF in '48, is a man who knows how to get a line on his subordinates. Doubtless, we was well aware that both General Quinn and Admiral Frankel are former stickmen. They played on the lacrosse teams at West Point and Annapolis.

GENERAL CURTIS E. LEMAY is demonstrating that his appeal for improvements in career attractiveness, made before the annual meeting of the Jewish War Veterans (The Journal 26 August) was no one shot affair. The CofS has told the 62d VFW Convention in Miami Beach: Attracting and keeping high quality people "is the most critical problem facing the Air Force. And it is one to which I am devoting a large part of my efforts." Those who know General LeMay can expect action in any situation in which he is devoting large efforts.

THE AF CHIEF said that when he succeeded General Thomas D. White, USAF-Ret., there were only 6 duty assignment changes. The other 5: Col. Richard H. Ellis, Executive Officer; Lt. Col. Warren Teck, Aide; Lt. Col. Grover Heiman, Special Assistant; CWO John Palmer, Administrative Assistant; and Mrs. Mary Miller, Secretary.

ARMY PEOPLE WILL SALUTE the action taken by Secretary Elvis J. Stahr, jr., and General George H. Decker, CofS, to assure prompt release of information concerning promotion selections. In making public the lists to temporary major and temporary colonel (see Page 13), the Army published statistical information about eligibles and passovers that heretofore it withheld. The Army continues to withhold, as does the Air Force, the names of selection board members. The Journal will publish such names whenever they can be learned. The Navy and Marine Corps demonstrate effectively by their open-door policy that the release of this information in no way violates security. The Sea Services take the position that full disclosure of promotion actions enhances morale.

REPORTS OF OUTSIDE PRESSURE are circulating within the Army in the wake of the decision to reopen Ft. Polk, La., as a Training Center. Many in the Army thought that Ft. Chaffee, Ark., would be opened first. It is being whispered—there is, of course, no official confirmation—that the Louisiana legislative delegation exerted considerable leverage to swing a favorable decision in favor of Polk.

HAS THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH surrendered to the Legislative Branch some of its responsibility for the release of Defense information? The facts of the case seem to indicate that the answer is "Yes." The Pentagon is making it a practice to give legislators several hours or more advance notice of such matters as base reopenings, contract awards, shipbuilding plans, and Reserve Forces actions.

AS A CONSEQUENCE, many important defense stories have broken off Capitol Hill, rather than from the Pentagon. While Secretary of the Army Elvis J. Stahr, jr., was holding his first news conference at the Pentagon to reveal Army buildup plans, the story already was moving from the Capitol where newsmen had been slipped copies of the Secretary's prepared statement.

THERE HAVE BEEN INSTANCES where one member of Congress hurriedly has called a hometown or homestate newspaper in the mistaken belief that he was giving them an exclusive, only to learn that another friendly legislator, who possibly had received the word even earlier from the Pentagon, already had passed along the information. It's a race to see which legislator can break the "Hold For Release" time first.

THIS IS A TOUGH PROBLEM, to be sure. Congress demands the right to be kept up-to-the-minute on Defense activities. But a strong case can be made that it is the responsibility of the Defense Department to make its own announcements, and not permit a situation in which Congress assumes this task.

INDUSTRY HAS AN INTEREST in the problem also. On numerous occasions, Pentagon information people have coordinated announcements with industrial firms and have made careful plans together to assure that the public was informed in an orderly manner. Then, suddenly, the story breaks from the Capitol—often with erroneous information—and both industry and the Defense Department then must throw away their previous plans and attempt a hasty recovery.

ONE POSSIBLE ANSWER: reduce the lead time in making advance information available to Senators and Representatives. That is a compromise at best. Another answer: let the Pentagon take an across-the-board stand, with full White House backing, that release of Defense announcements is exclusively a responsibility of the Executive Branch. There may be protests from Congress, but if the policy is maintained on a 100% basis, it will win favor, and prevent legislative leak races.

PROSPECT: The Pentagon will continue to provide advanced information to Congress on a "hold for release" basis. The "HFR" time will not be honored. There will be more Defense news breaks from Congress.

IT COULD BE COINCIDENCE, but Senator Margaret Chase Smith's letter urging action on the recomputation pay bill (see page 1) was written on 25 August, the date on which last week's Journal reached her desk. The letter notes that the U. of Michigan report has been before the Armed Services Committee for two months; that 30 Senators, including five members of the Committee, have sponsored recomputation legislation; and that the Departments of Defense, Treasury and Commerce all have supported the proposal. Each of these points also was made in the Journal story.

BRIG. GEN. HOWARD W. DOAN, Director of Personnel Training, Office of the Army Surgeon General, will become Deputy to Lt. Gen. Leonard D. Heaton, Surgeon General, upon the retirement 30 September of Maj. Gen. Thomas J. Hartford. Col. Edward C. Dunn, nominated for brigadier general, will become Deputy Commander of the Army Training Center, Ft. Carson, Colo. He is now with the MAAG Vietnam.

SERVICE LEADERS ARE PLEASED with the response of most of the 76,500 members of National Guard and Reserve units slated for active duty beginning 1 October. Wherever possible, the Pentagon has sought to station these units near their homes—at least initially—but some will be sent to training sites hundreds of miles away. There will be inevitable hardships for hundreds of persons. Nonetheless, the first reaction of the Guardsmen and Reservists, across the country, was a positive one that held bright prospects for high morale.

PENTAGON OFFICIALS will strive to hold a firm line in preventing large-scale active duty exemptions among members of Reserve Forces units called to active duty. Already, pressures are being exerted—some of them reportedly with political ramifications—to obtain releases from active duty. Military leaders know that such releases—except under the most carefully guarded conditions—would damage the effectiveness of individual units and could wreck morale across the board.

THERE HAS BEEN AMPLE TIME for those who felt their civilian services could not be spared to resign from the Reserve Forces. The realistic approach at the Pentagon is that persons who were active in the Reserve Forces, who received pay, promotion, and retirement credits should be ready to fulfill their active duty obligations in event of emergency. And this is exactly what the vast majority of Guardsmen and Reservists are doing.

THE RAPID MANPOWER BUILDUP will create a critical shortage of physicians and dentists. Plans were being studied this week for the possible drafting of 500 to 600 physicians.

LOOK FOR REPRESENTATIVE PORTER HARDY (D-Va) to offer an amendment to the resolution recognizing San Diego as the birthplace of Naval Aviation. Representative Sam Stratton (D-NY), claiming the honor for Hammondsport, N. Y. (see story, page 1), already has objected to the proposal sponsored by Representative Bob Wilson (R-Calif). Now, Congressman Hardy is getting into the fight.

A NAVY HISTORY will be cited to show that the first aircraft demonstration flight made by the Sea Service took place at Hampton Roads, Va., in November 1910. Congressman Hardy will seek to establish that Norfolk, Va., was the "actual birthplace" of Naval aviation. He says the flight of Eugene Ely from the USS Birmingham "had not come to my attention at the time the Armed Services Committee approved the Wilson resolution." It has always been recognized that "Naval Aviation was closely identified with Norfolk in its beginning," Congressman Hardy asserts.

BRIG. GEN. JAMES D. HITTLE, USMC-Ret., former Assistant to the Secretary of Defense for Legislative Affairs, and now VFW Director of National Security and Foreign Affairs, has authorized a new book, "The Military Staff." Published by the Military Service Division, Stackpole Publishing Co., Harrisburg, Pa., the 306-page volume ($5.50) traces the history and development of the military staff from about 1800 B.C. to the present, and discusses the current military staff organizations of both the United States and the Soviet Union. (Other retired activities, Page 26).

A NEW NATIONAL RECORD was set as the Army's Eastern Team won the Infantry Trophy Team Match, final event of the '61 National Rifle and Pistol Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio. The Eastern Team, with a 1234 score, beat the U.S. Army Team, 1193, and the Army Western Team, 1188. The old record of 1107 was set in '59. Members of the top Army team are Sgt. Donald C. Tabor, Sp4 William O. Harden, M/Sgt. James B. Manning, Sp5 Robert L. Meeks, M/Sgt. Charles J. Summerfield, and Sp4 William R. Lee. (Marines win match, Page 20).

President Signs New Travel Allowance Law For Reservists, National Guard

PRESIDENT Kennedy has signed a new travel allowance law for Reservists and National Guardsmen.

The law (PL 87-164) permits the same travel allowances to be paid to all Reserve personnel when authorized by the Service Secretaries to perform additional duty, whether in a pay or nonpay status.

Under previous law, Reserve personnel ordered to training duty without pay were not authorized the travel allowances provided for other Reservists. They were furnished only "with transportation to and from such duty, with subsistence en route."

In situations where it was not feasible to furnish transportation and subsistence in kind, these Reservists were entitled to reimbursement for the transportation furnished, and meals could not exceed $150 in cost.

At the same time, other Reservists performing either active duty with pay or inactive duty training with pay when required to travel away from unit headquarters were entitled to travel allowances which included reimbursement of actual costs of transportation or a mileage allowance.

The new law makes such allowances uniform for all Reserve personnel by permitting the Reservists on training duty without pay to be authorized the allowances set forth in section 303(a) of the Career Compensation Act.

BLISS REPORTS FIRST PERFECT HAWK SCORE

THE 8th Missile Battalion (Hawk), 3d Artillery, has become the first Hawk unit to fire a perfect score in the advanced unit training phase since the 1st Guided Missile Brigade started its Hawk unit training program in 1960.

In order to receive a perfect score, a unit must fire eight out of eight successful Hawk missiles at aerial targets at McGregor Guided Missile Range, N. Mex.

The Battalion is commanded by Lt. Col. Sabatine R. Marconi. Since its activation 10 March 1961, the battalion has been attached to the 2d Guided Missile Group and has trained under the supervision of the 5th Guided Missile Battalion (Hawk).

Senator Smith Calls For Action On Retired Pay Equalization

Here is the text of Senator Margaret Chase Smith's (R-Maine) letter to Chairman Richard B. Russell (D-Ga) of the Senate Armed Services Committee, urging action on the retirement recomputation bill:

My dear Mr. Chairman:

Although I have favored the legislation to equalize the pay of retired members of the uniformed services from the outset, I have refrained from committing myself on the legislation. I have maintained this position for some time because of waiting for the Michigan University Study Committee report on the matter.

Report Made 27 June

That report was made to the Committee on June 27, 1961. I have studied the report and I am not impressed with it at all. I believe that a sufficient and reasonable time has now been had for a full study and consideration of that report since we have had it before us for two months.

In addition to that, the Committee has received favorable reports on the legislation from the Department of Defense, the Department of the Treasury and the Department of Commerce. These favorable reports were received by the Committee in March of this year and have been before the Committee for its consideration now for five months.

The legislation is authorized by thirty Senators, five of whom are members of the Committee on Armed Services—Senators Bridges, Symington, Jackson, Engle and Bartlett.

Vote Up Or Down

From all indications, we are approaching an end of this session some time within a month or less—and with all respect I submit that in view of what I have outlined above, this legislation should be voted up or down by the Committee in the near future, whether it be S. 401 or S. 626.

Therefore, I urge that S. 401 and S. 626 be considered for action at the next meeting of the Committee.

Bolté Plan Promotion Warning

suggested, and Air Force witnesses agreed that any comparison of the AF officer structure with that of the Army "wouldn't be quite fair."

Chairman Russell asked if it isn't true that the Air Force has a higher selection rate than either the Army or Navy. Colonel Berg replied, "Yes, sir."

The Senator said Air Force selections run about 65% and the Navy's about 70%. The selection opportunity to be provided under the Air Force legislation will be 80%. Air Force captains and majors first considered for temporary promotion to major and lieutenant colonel in 1960 suffered only a 15% non-selection factor.

Statistics furnished to the Committee show that 4,437 out of 5,201 captains (or better than 85% of the total group) won promotion on either their first or second go-around. Similarly, 1,471 out of 1,734 majors (barely less than 85%) were selected for lieutenant colonel.

Chairman Russell wanted to know if it isn't true that the Air Force has been "selecting more than you had slots for?" The witnesses agreed but said such action has been necessary in order to give Air Force officers a career progression comparable to that offered by the other Services.

Chairman Russell said the Air Force has 10,279 lieutenant colonels, at present, and the number would be increased to 15,000 under the terms of the House bill. This would mean an increase of 50% in the lieutenant colonel ranks, he observed, and "under ordinary circumstances I don't believe that would be justified."

With a touch of weariness, he added that these are not "ordinary" times, however, and that the "unusual conditions" existing today offer no alternative to approval of the Air Force plan.

The Senate Chairman ended the hearings on a note of warning. When the Bolté plan reaches Capitol Hill, he said, "we will have a detailed examination of the grade requirements for the Air Force along with the other Services to see if all of the billets, as I understand the Bolté Report recommends for commissioned personnel, are really required and justified."

The Senator remarked that "the Air Force has 129,000 officers compared to 99,000 in the Army and 69,000 in the Navy."

Photographed Atomic Strikes

Maj. Gen. Charles W. Schott, USAF Deputy Inspector General for Inspection has announced assignment of Lt. Col. Omer L. Cox to the Directorate of Support Services Inspection at Norton AFB, Calif. The Directorate of Support Services Inspection is headed by Col. T. G. Wold.

Colonel Cox, who graduated from George Washington University in 1949 with a Bachelor of Arts degree and was awarded his Masters degree in 1954 from the University of Michigan, was commander of the B-29 that photographed the results of the atomic raids at Hiroshima and Nagasaki a few hours after both strikes.

His last assignment was at the U. S. Air Force Academy where he was Associate Professor of English and Division Academic Counselor for Humanities.

Service Leaders Inspect Canadair's "Swing-Tail" Turboprop Air Freighter

Representatives of the Army, Navy, and Air Force inspected Canadair's CL-44 turbo-prop, swing-tail air freighter on display this week at the International Terminal, Washington National Airport.

The giant aircraft, largest ever to land at Washington National, was flown in by The Flying Tiger Line which already has taken delivery on five of the ten CL-44s it has ordered.

Prominent among the many Service officers who inspected the aircraft were Maj. Gen. Frank S. Besson, Jr., Chief of Transportation of the Army, and Maj. Gen. I. Sewell Morris, USA, Director of the Military Traffic Management Agency, and representatives of their office. There were also a number of officers from the Military Air Transport Service.

Produced by Canadair, Montreal subsidiary of the General Dynamics Corporation, the "44" is the largest commercial airfreighter ever built. It is a four-engine turbo prop, powered with Rolls-Royce engines, and can haul a 65,000-pound payload more than 3,250 miles at a cruising speed of 400 miles an hour.

Robert W. Prescott, president of Flying Tiger, said the airline has begun regular operation of the first of its new fleet of "44's" on the Pacific for MATS and plans to start domestic commercial service this Fall.

J. Geoffrey Notman, president of Canadair, said that Seaboard World Airlines has ordered 5 of the aircraft and Slick Airlines, two.

The 44's on the Tiger's Pacific run for MATS have carried both cargo and passengers and a combination of both. For passengers the Tigers' have the plane arranged to carry 148, but other seating arrangements provide for 168. The Tigers also have plans for a high density seating arrangement to carry 216 passengers in transatlantic service. It could do this, provided permission were granted, for "well below" $200 a round trip, Mr. Prescott said.

INDUSTRY IN DEFENSE

LOGISTICS NETWORK BEGINS; WESTERN UNION, RCA WORK ON NATION-WIDE TASK

INSTALLATION of the USAF Combat Logistic Network (COMLOGNET) has begun at Norton AFB, Calif. Maj. Gen. Harold W. Grant, Commander of the Air Force Communications Service, and President Walter P. Marshall of Western Union, prime contractor of the project, made the announcement. Radio Corporation of America will supply the automatic electronic switching center equipment.

The Norton installation is the first of five main centers through which data and messages from more than 350 air bases, depots, and stations in the U. S. will be interchanged. Completely automatic and compatible with other Department of Defense communications systems, the COMLOGNET will be capable of sending and receiving more than 100 million words, or an equivalent seven million punched cards daily.

When completed in 1962 the COMLOGNET will be operated by AFCS personnel specially trained in the advanced telecommunications techniques developed through research by the Air Force and Western Union.

Centers similar to the one at Norton AFB will be established at McClellan AFB, Calif.; Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio; Tinker AFB, Oklahoma City, Okla.; and Andrews AFB, Md.

Each of the five centers will contain both message and circuit switching elements, each able to operate independently. They will integrate data processing with record communications techniques through automatic electronic means requiring a minimum of human attendance.

COMLOGNET will be the world's largest and most advanced data communications system and will attain a degree of speed, accuracy, and reliability never before achieved. It will transmit at speeds from 100 to 3000 words per minute. The centers are designed to employ speeds 20 times that rate when needed, and are built on a modular basis permitting future growth and adaptation to advances in data communications.

AF Contract Marks B-70 Project Progress

A $1 million Air Force contract for modification of buildings at Air Force Plant 42, Palmdale, Calif., has been awarded to North American Aviation of Inglewood, Calif., to make ready the needed facilities for final assembly and production flight test of the B-70 Mach 3 bomber prototypes.

Several existing structures at Plant 42, including those used by Convair Division, General Dynamics Corporation, in the F-106 flight test program, will be modified to conform to the increased size of the B-70 and its increased weight and need for increased electrical facilities.

The contract will enable North American to proceed under the currently directed program for final assembly and flight test of the three B-70 prototypes, the first of which is scheduled for flight in December 1962.

North American will complete B-70 components at its Inglewood plant which are small enough to be ground transportable to Palmdale. Those components will be assembled into the complete prototype at Palmdale.

Building modifications to be made under the contract will include the addition of a 75 by 150-foot lean-to to one building to make it large enough for assembly of the complete prototypes, the addition of electrical power equipment to check out electrical and electronic subsystems of the B-70, and also to check out its hydraulic subsystems. Ramp facilities will be modified, and an overhead material handling system and floor hoists will be installed.

LOW LEVEL RADAR:

AF Crewmen Train At Boeing Plant

Air Force pilots and navigators have received training in 14 classes at The Boeing Company, Wichita, Kans., in a B-52 advanced capability radar course.

The joint Boeing-Air Force program was designed to provide advance training in the low level terrain avoidance flight simulator.

Pilots were given 56 hours of instruction; navigators received 40 hours. Instruction included how to interpret information shown on radar scopes and what coordination with other crew members is necessary during "on the deck" flights.

RYAN SPACE TASK

The Electronics Division of Ryan Aeronautical Company, San Diego, has been awarded a $450,000 NASA contract for design, development and fabrication of high altitude Radar Altimeters for the Saturn space vehicle.

Under the agreement Ryan Electronics is to develop a radar system capable of recording altitude measurements up to 250 miles. Although radar altimeters are being used in current rockets, none meet the long-range requirements of the Saturn program.

The Ryan Saturn radar altimeter will measure the travel time of a single radar pulse transmitted from the vehicle to the ocean (in this application) and reflected back to the vehicle. Weighing only some 16 pounds, the compact unit will be employed in later multi-stage firing of the 1.5 million pound thrust Saturn.

AF Orders More Huskies

The Kaman Aircraft Corporation, Bloomfield, Conn., has received an additional Air Force contract of $3.5 million for H-43B Huskie helicopters.

The H-43B is on duty at nearly 50 Air Force bases on stand-by crash rescue alert. It recently established a world's record by carrying a payload of 2,205.5 lbs. to over 26,369 feet.

Kaman Aircraft is also in production of the HU2K-1 Seasprite for the Navy.

Atomic Test Security Officer Leaves Service

Col. William A. Watkins, Provost Marshal, Army Aviation Center Ft. Rucker, Ala., has retired.

He resides at 306 Tanglewood Road, Windsor Forrest, Savannah, Ga.

ond ship of this type constructed to support the Polaris carrying submarines at advanced bases. These support ships will enable the submarines to spend a larger proportion of time at effective stations in a ready condition by avoiding the necessity for time-consuming returns to continental U. S. bases for resupply and refit.

The guided missile frigate (nuclear) will be the second nuclear powered frigate to be built. With its increased cruising range, this ship will be capable of extended operation either independently or as a part of a strike force.

The guided missile frigates will be built to the design of the frigates in the previous year's program. Their combined TERRIER and ASROC missile systems, ASW torpedoes, and 5"/54 guns will enable these ships to operate offensively against air, surface, and subsurface enemy components.

The amphibious transports dock and the amphibious assault ship are of the same design as recent programs. These ships are designed to utilize helicopters for vertical envelopment and will transport, land, and support troops in assaults against enemy held coastal areas.

The nuclear powered submarines will be repeats of the THRESHER class, combining the efficient hull form of the ALBACORE with nuclear power. Their quiet operating machinery and advanced detection devices enable them to operate effectively against surface and submarine targets.

The escort ships will follow the newly designed ships of the 1961 program, combining improved sea keeping ability with advanced antisubmarine warfare capabilities, including long range sonar, ASROC, ASW torpedoes, and drone anti-submarine helicopters.

The guided missile escort ships in addition to ASW capabilities will also be fitted with the TARTAR missile system for operations against enemy air units.

The combat store ship, also a repeat of the 1961 design, will carry provisions, general stores, and aviation supplies for fast underway replenishment of combat forces.

The hydrofoil research ship will update the current knowledge of this new type with advanced developments in design of hydrofoils. This will be the largest hydrofoil ship built to date, displacing some 250 tons.

Oceanographic research ships are repeats of ships now building. They will be used to carry out research in connection with antisubmarine warfare and to support the National Oceanographic Research Program.

The surveying ship, as its name implies, will be employed in the charting of the ocean floor.

The destroyer and submarine conversions are a continuation of the fleet modernization and rehabilitation program to ward off the effects of obsolescence in selected ships built in World War II.

The missile range ship conversion will be employed in support of the Pacific Missile Range, while the major communications relay ship conversion will be capable of supplying vital communications services in any sea area of the world.

Hughes Builds Lightweight Turbine Copter For Evaluation By Army Aviation Board

HUGHES Tool Company's Aircraft Division will produce five new lightweight helicopters, the Hughes Model 369, for Army evaluation in a Light Observation Helicopter (LOH) competitions.

Rea E. Hopper, Vice-President and Division General Manager, said contract negotiations with the Army Transportation Materiel Command are under way, and development of the evaluation vehicles will begin soon at the division's Culver City, Calif., plant facilities. Value of the development contract is yet to be determined.

The Army has indicated its LOH program is aimed at eventual procurement of about 4,000 machines.

The Hughes Model 369, given the Army designation HO-6, will be of four-place configuration and turbine-powered, in accordance with Army specifications. The program calls for five of the vehicles to be delivered to the Army Aviation Board at Ft. Rucker, Ala., for testing and evaluation about 24 months after contract work begins.

Albert W. Bayer, Division Marketing Vice-President, said plans call for having the Model 369 helicopter certificated by the Federal Aviation Agency. The vehicle's small size and simplicity will make it marketable at a low cost, he said. Production techniques currently being applied to the commercial version of the two-place Hughes Model 269A helicopter will be employed in manufacturing the Model 369.

B-52 Launch Role Expansion Seen

THE role of the B-52 as a recoverable satellite booster may be extended beyond TX-15 and Dyna-Soar applications for launching combined booster-payload weights of more than 200,000 pounds, J. J. Clark, Director of Engineering for The Boeing Company's Wichita, Kans., Division, has declared.

Recent Boeing studies show that the B-52's combination of speed, altitude and payload carrying capability "make it the best suited of existing aircraft and nearly optimum as compared to planned vehicles for launching of satellites or other space-directed vehicles," a company announcement said.

The study also showed that substantial booster cost savings were possible over ground-launch techniques, particularly for relatively small vehicles. "Each additional launch from the B-52 as a recoverable booster would further improve the economy factor," Mr. Clark explained.

He also cited the advantages of manned launching platform mobility and said, "The B-52 could launch a satellite directed into any desired orbit rather than be restricted by our present ground station locations."

The B-52 has been used successfully for launching the X-15 rocket vehicle, designed to explore the lower edges of space.

A B-52 also will be modified at the Wichita Division for launching the Dyna-Soar manned space system now under development. The Boeing Company's Aero-Space Division is system contractor for Dyna-Soar.

Col. Phillip C. Rawlins, USAF, has been assigned to the staff of JUSMG, Spain, as Director of Plans, under Maj. Gen. Joseph D. Caldar, USAF.

Colonel Rawlins had been assigned to the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for International Security Affairs in the Pentagon.

Comptroller Restricts USCOA Cancellations By Retired

THE Defense Department has been told that there are only three ways a retired career officer may be permitted to stop payments on his Contingency Option Act annuity.

He must die, resign from his retired status, or be removed from the retired list.

This strict interpretation of USCOA—which is now in process of being revamped by Congress—has been imposed upon the Pentagon by Comptroller General Joseph Campbell.

Specifically, Mr. Campbell denied the Services permission to discontinue Annuity Act deductions from retired military personnel who had completely relinquished their retirement pay in order to receive a Civil Service annuity or disability compensation under the Federal Employees Compensation Act.

Under USCOA, military personnel can elect to have a percentage of their retired pay withheld in order to provide an annuity for their family in case of death.

The Comptroller said that even though retired personnel are receiving no retired pay, they must pay into the U. S. Treasury the amount which would otherwise have been deducted from their retired pay. This is the case, Mr. Campbell said, even if both the member and his family both wish to discontinue coverage under USCOA.

The only other way to discontinue USCOA coverage, Mr. Campbell said, is to resign or, be removed from the retired list.

Military personnel who have part of their retired pay deducted under the USCOA annuity plan while on the Temporary Disability Retired List, may have these deductions repaid to them if they are restored to active duty.

Under the terms of the USCOA amendments now before the Senate Armed Services Committee, members would be permitted to withdraw from participation in the program "when requiring the member to continue to participate in the program would violate equity and good conscience."

However, the House Armed Services Committee said in reporting the bill, that "inasmuch as the withdrawing member has in fact the protection of the act until such time as his withdrawal is approved, no reductions from his retired or retainer pay will be refunded to him."

In order to provide "a measure of control over such withdrawals" and to enable the USCOA Board of Actuaries to "measure the financial effects" such withdrawals would have on the system, the new amendments require the actuaries to include in their annual report a detailed actuarial analysis of all cases in which such relief is granted.

The House Committee said such a review "will insure that the Secretaries concerned will not, in their natural anxiety to correct a possible injustice to a few, inflict a financial injustice, even though small, upon the many."

Many Service people have complained that the lack of flexibility in the USCOA program, despite its many benefits, is a serious shortcoming.

The new ruling of the Comptroller General will strengthen this conviction, and is certain to lead to increased support for remedial legislation.

It would appear likely that between now and the time the 1962 session of Congress convenes that this matter will receive new study at the Pentagon.

Motion Picture Officer Need

The Air Force has a shortage of motion picture officers. About a dozen Reservists in the rank of captain or lieutenant will be recalled to active duty on a voluntary basis under the Fiscal Year 1962 Recall Program.

Skipper Changes

Capt. Paul K. Blesh, who commands the Elokomin (AO 55), will become skipper of the carrier Hancock.

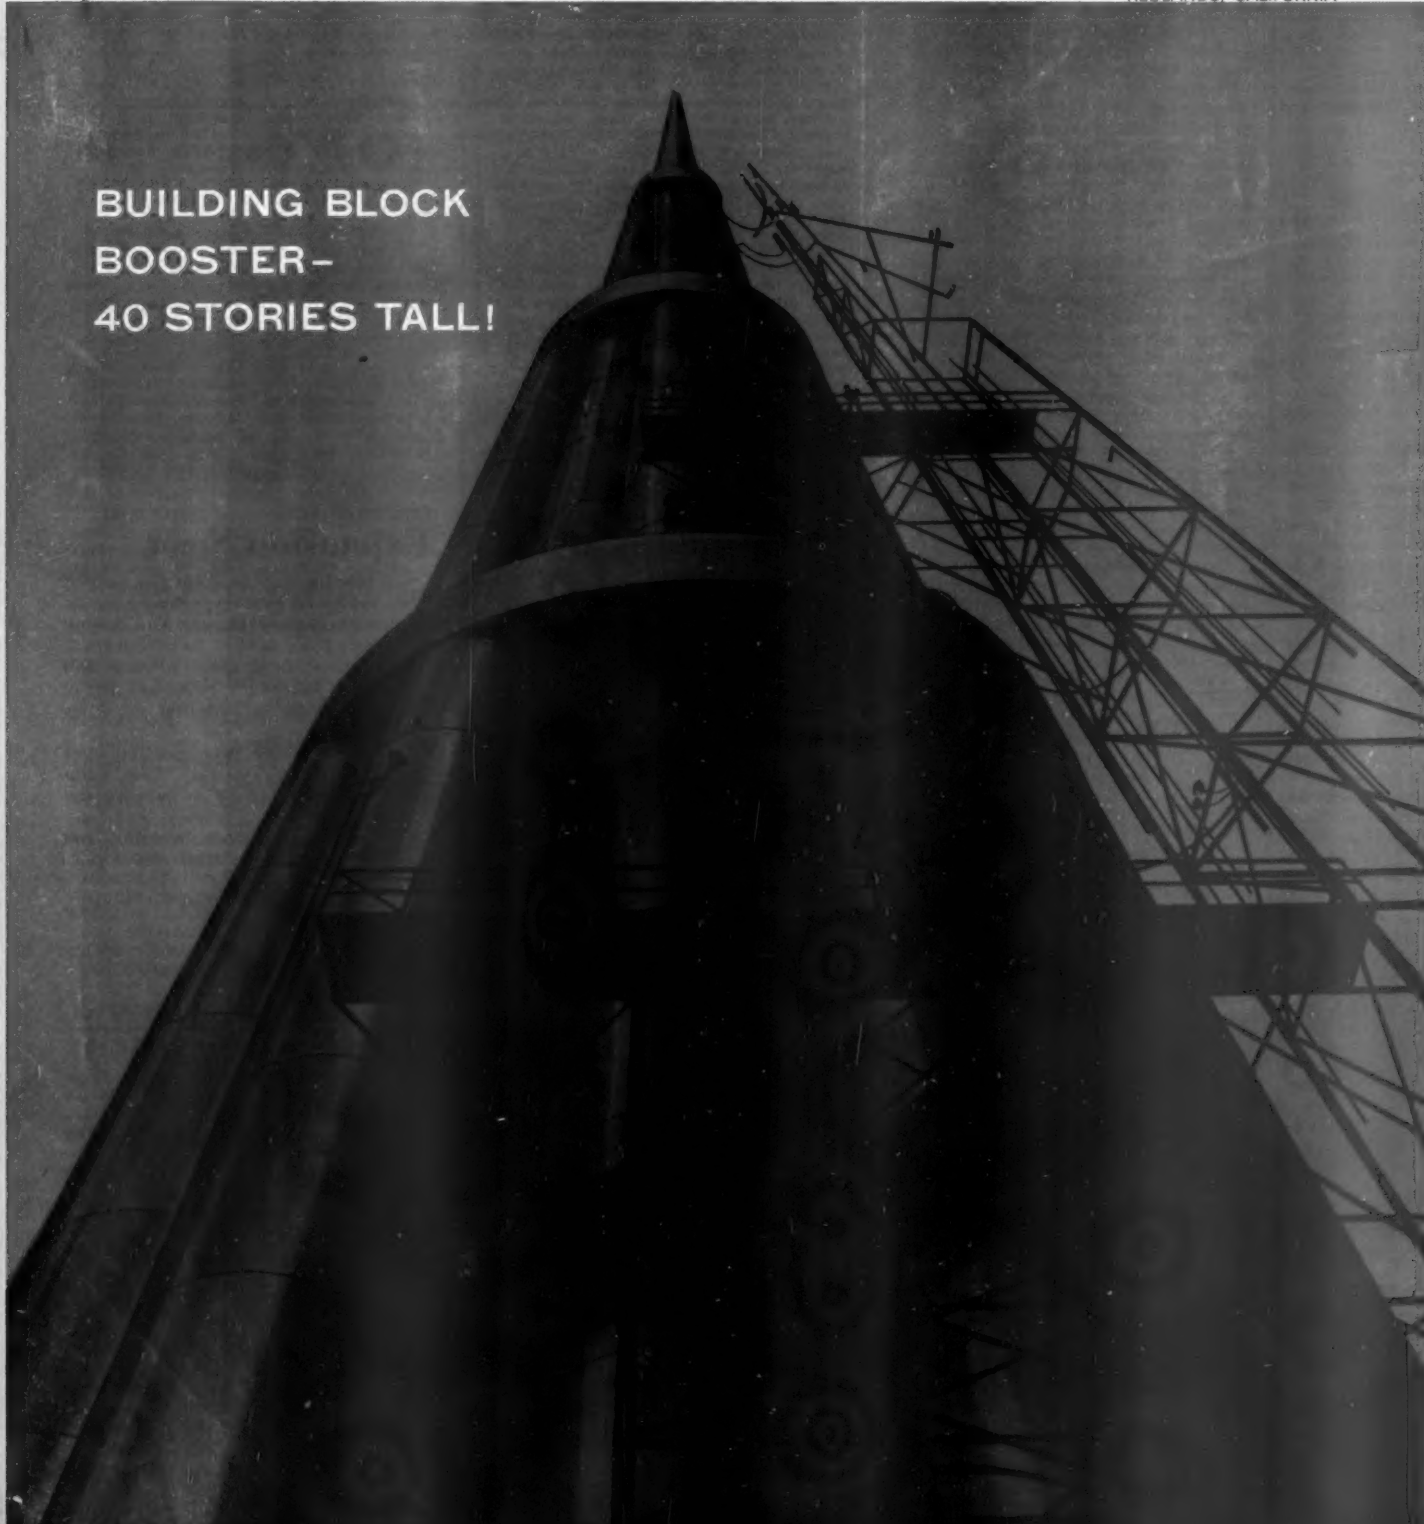

Capt. George C. Bullard will leave command of the Rainier (AE 5) to take the bridge of the carrier Bon Homme Richard.

Capt. Robert E. Dorwin leaves the cruiser Los Angeles for duty with the JCS Joint Staff.

This gigantic GCR-proposed solid propellant booster is made up of easy-to-haul segments that simply would be bolted together at launch site. It could put a 350,000-pound space station in orbit—or send a 130,000-pound manned spacecraft to the moon. It can be developed, built, tested, assembled, maintained, and operated for a small fraction of the cost of a comparable liquid system—yet it is much more reliable. It can be operational by 1965—if we start now. Smaller solid boosters—able to orbit 50,000 pounds—can be available by 1964. GRAND CENTRAL ROCKET COMPANY
